This project provided operational support for tidal wetlands management technical support provided by the Center for Coastal Resources Management Wetlands Program staff. Wetlands Program personnel provided routine advisories and impact assessment preparation; maintenance of a permit database and website; and produced newsletters and the supporting materials for outreach education offerings. Technical advisory activities encompassed everything from verbal communications to written environmental assessments. Four computer-based elements: GPS, Sybase, word processing and ArcView/ArcInfo are required in order to produce the electronic permit review reports. In January, the Wetlands Program began reviewing Joint Permit Applications for completeness. When an application does not include the minimal information necessary for VIMS to provide relevant project-specific recommendations, the application is considered incomplete. Significant effort was made this grant period to develop the incomplete form and a protocol for implementation; to design an online tutorial to help applicants correctly fill out the JPA; to make modifications to the website incorporating these changes; and to continuously review all incoming applications. The website has been updated to indicate the status of applications by color coding and by separating the permit data into parts to make it easier for slower computers to open. VIMS alone serves the permit data online which is routinely accessed by applicants and other government agencies through a searchable database. The permit data includes the original joint permit application, VIMS permit review reports and incomplete forms, and all related additional information, public notices and photos. CCRM produces two biannual newsletters – the Virginia Wetlands Report and Rivers & Coast. The Virginia Wetlands Report informs readers of near-shore environmental science and related issues to influence better tidal shoreline decisions, and serves to announce upcoming workshops and educational opportunities. The Rivers & Coast newsletter covers one topic written for three perspectives – the general public, managers, and legislators – and provides information that goes from the big picture down to local relevance. Both newsletters are mailed to approximately 2000 individuals, including all local wetlands board members, local and state agency personnel, General Assembly members, and interested private citizens. The newsletters are distributed for free to any interested subscriber, and available online. To improve communication with these subscribers (that provided email addresses, currently 675), the Center recently began sending a monthly e-newsletter. The CCRM e-newsletter provides the reader with reminders, quick tips, and alerts, by summarizing issues that relate to coastal and estuarine resources, shoreline and wetland habitats, climate change, and shallow water management and pointing the reader to more detailed information on our website. The Wetlands Program was also responsible for organizing and hosting two Tidal Wetlands Workshops held at VIMS on February 12th & September 17th 2009. CCRM co-hosted a workshop with CBNERRS on October 24th, 2008. Staff provided training for the Westmoreland Wetlands Board on August 17th, 2009. Three trainings for local government staff on Integrated Shoreline Management were held locally for the Eastern Shore PDC on October 10th, 2008, Northern Neck PDC on November 20th, 2008 and Northern Virginia Regional Commission on February 24th, 2009. To view any of the previously mentioned items, please see CCRM's website (<http://ccrm.vims.edu/>).

The proposed groin(s) will, by design, interrupt sediment transport along the shore. This will likely result in a loss of sediment on the down drift side of the groin, increase the erosion risk, and increase the loss of shoreline habitats.

VIMS Shoreline Permit Application Report # 09-0163

NOTE

The Virginia Institute of Marine Science (VIMS) applies an integrated coastal management perspective during the review of proposed activities on tidal shorelines. The coastal ecosystem has dynamic connections between wetlands, coastal waters and the surrounding landscape. This provides valuable ecosystem services, such as maintaining water quality, shoreline stability, and wildlife habitat. Activities should be designed to avoid adverse impacts to coastal resources. When impacts are unavoidable, every effort should be made to minimize impacts and provide compensation as required.

EXISTING SITE CONDITIONS AND PROPOSED ACTIVITY:

The applicant proposes (6/8/09 revision) construction of 2 stone groins on his Chesapeake Bay shoreline on Gwynn's Island. The applicant's shoreline and the adjacent small lot to the south make up a small embayment set back from the adjacent shorelines. Except for this embayment, the entire shoreline in this area is hardened with bulkheads or riprap. Groins are also prevalent in the area and appear to have been successful at collecting sand. The embayed shoreline consists of a wide beach, a low dune feature, and low upland that was previously forested. The land has recently been cleared. A house is planned just landward of the back edge of the dune.

Based on analysis of aerial photography by the VIMS Shoreline Studies Program, this sandy shoreline eroded significantly from 1937-1994. However, the rate of erosion from 1994-2002 was relatively small (~1 ft./yr.), and the shoreline actually accreted (MHW moved channelward) between 2002 & 2007.

THE PREFERRED APPROACH FOR THIS SHORELINE FROM AN INTEGRATED MARINE ENVIRONMENTAL VIEWPOINT:

Although this portion of the shoreline does not appear to be actively eroding at present, the proposed development will be at risk from flooding and storm activity. If the risky development cannot be avoided, some action is warranted.

The preferred approach for this shoreline is to enhance the existing dune. This could be done by installing sand fencing and planting more dune vegetation. The dune could also be artificially nourished. Dunes serve as protective barriers from flooding and erosion, provide reservoirs of sand to replenish the beach zone, and provide habitat for a variety of plants and animals. The natural vegetation occurring on sand dunes can act as a baffle, slowing wind speed and causing wind-borne sand to settle and be trapped in the vegetation resulting in accretion of the dune.

If structures are permitted, the preferred structural approach for this type of embayed beach is to install headland structures, sometimes called headland breakwaters, attached to the existing hardened headlands at the mouth of the embayment, combined with artificial beach nourishment.

THE LESS PREFERRED APPROACH:

VIMS Shoreline Permit Application Report # 09-0163

Groins are less preferred in this situation. In addition to the direct loss of beach habitat, by design, groins interrupt sediment transport along the shore. This interruption is likely to result in a loss of sand around the groins, which increases the erosion risk and increases the loss of shoreline habitats. If groins are permitted, we recommend that the groin cells be artificially filled with a significant quantity of clean sand of particle size composition similar to that currently existing on the beach, and that consideration be given to incorporating spurs on the groins to help retain sand on the beach and prevent erosion around the groins and on the adjacent lot. The revised application proposes conflicting stone sizes. The larger stone size indicated (300-600 lbs.) is preferable at this site to Class I (50-150 lbs).

SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS:

PREFERRED APPROACH:

- *Temporary use of sand fences.
- *Beach/dune nourishment using clean sand fill and plant dune vegetation.
- *Construct headland structures, with beach nourishment.

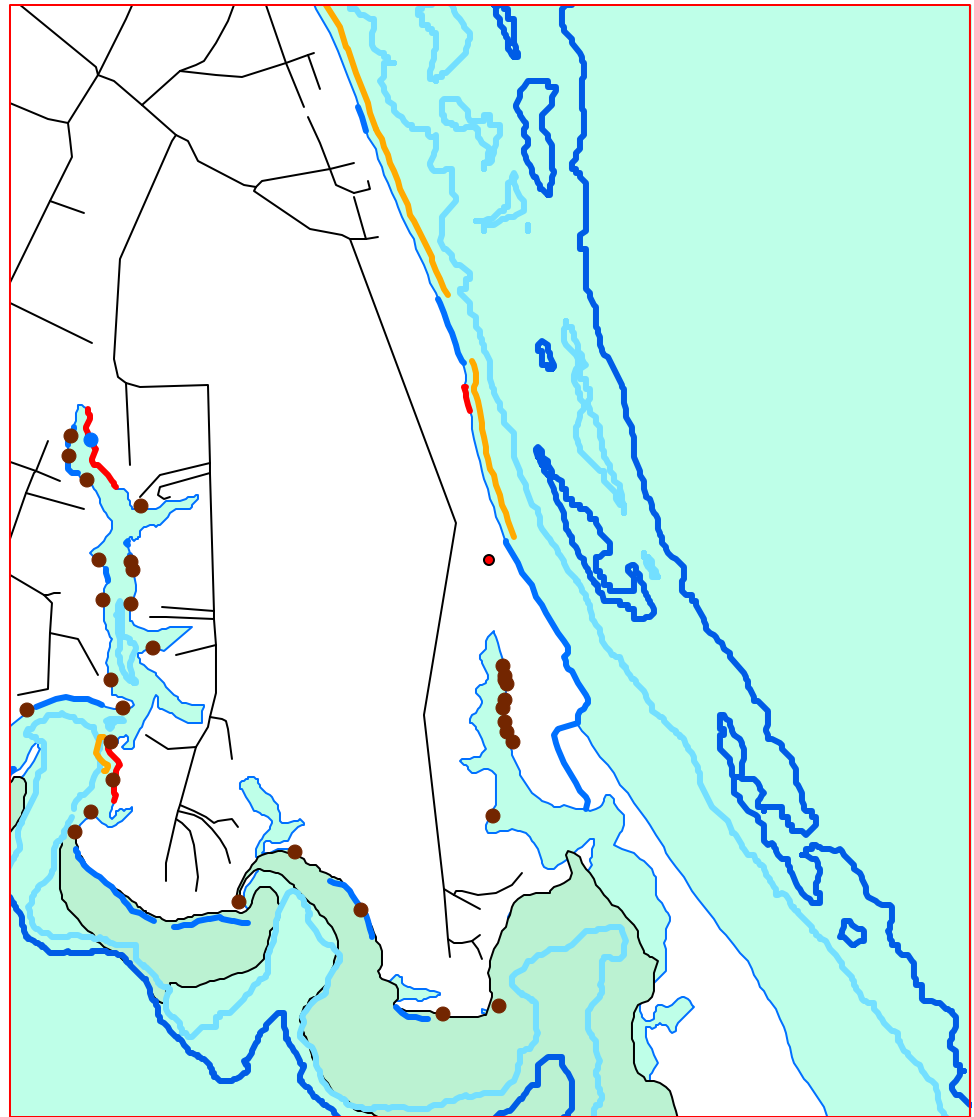

LESS PREFERRED APPROACH:

- *Construct groins with spurs and beach nourishment.
